

Ercros signs an agreement with the UB for an archaeological intervention on a land plot located in the Flix factory

Ercros has signed a collaboration agreement with the University of Barcelona (UB) to perform an archaeological intervention on land belonging to the 100-year-old Flix factory.

This action will be carried out, during the first half of July, by nine university students of the UB archaeology degree within the regulated university practices plan.

The intervention is focused on the study of historic industrial buildings dedicated to the manufacture of explosives, such as that existed at the time in the aforementioned terrain where archaeological trial pits are now being made.
