

Ercros, finalist at Randstad Awards to the labour attractiveness

Felipe Collado and Juan Ignacio Ledesma from Ercros' Pharmaceuticals Division collecting the award with Mayte Madrid, director of Randstad area.

Ercros is a finalist among companies in the Spanish chemical sector, candidates for the Randstad Awards 2016 to the labour appeal. This award, which has celebrated its seventh edition, recognizes the economic conditions of the companies, their prospects and the work environment.

Felipe Collado, head of synthesis area at the Pharmaceuticals Division, and Juan Ignacio Ledesma, head of human resources at the Pharmaceuticals Division, represented Ercros at the gala awards ceremony, which took place on May 12 at Círculo de Bellas Artes in Madrid.

Randstad, whose business is focused on temporary employment and human resources, holds annually the largest survey on enterprises with more labour attractiveness around the world. The selection of the winners is done through a questionnaire to 200,000 people from 25 countries, 10,500 of them are Spanish.
