

A new class of interns joins Ercros

The new students accompanied by Mario Lorenzo, Sílvia Padró and Joan Miquel Capdevila

This week, five students have joined the Ercros industrial complex in Tarragona (CIT). Four students are taking the advanced training cycle (CFGS) in Industrial Chemistry at the Comte de Rius Institute, and one student is studying the CFGS in International Trade at the Vidal i Barraquer Institute. Each student is assigned to one of the three factories that make up the complex, but on their first day they were given a joint welcome and training session.

The reception included a presentation of Ercros and the CIT, by Joan Miquel Capdevila, director of the complex; as well as different training sessions given by professionals in the areas of environment, quality, technical and health prevention, energy and human resources. Mario Lorenzo, head of industrial relations, and Sílvia Padró, head of training, both from the CIT, also participated in the welcome.

Ercros welcomes this new group of students and trusts that their stay at CIT will contribute positively to their training and professional development.
